January 27, 2016 Speaker
Hugh McLaurin, CSDS
Owner, Securis Central Maryland

Hugh McLaurin is the owner of Securis Central Maryland, which specializes in responsibly recycling decommissioned IT assets and electronics equipment, and securely destroys all forms of data storage media to prevent it from being compromised.

Before joining the Securis network, Mr. McLaurin had a 35-year career in the federal government, including 11 years in the Senior Executive Service.. Mr. McLaurin holds a bachelor 's degree in electrical engineering from the University of Maryland, and a master's degree in engineering from Johns Hopkins University.

Mr. McLaurin fulfilled a longstanding desire to build a business from the ground floor up by becoming one of the first Securis franchisees. His Securis territory, which includes Howard, Montgomery, Carroll, Frederick and Washington Counties in Central Maryland, is very familiar territory for him, having grown up in Montgomery County, living for many years in Carroll County, and currently living in Howard County. Strong ties to many people, communities, institutions and businesses in all five counties make him eager to serve a broad spectrum of customers across this territory.

Protecting Data in Decommissioned IT Assets: Factors, Tools and Methods

Companies, government institutions and individuals expend a great deal of time and resources protecting sensitive data from being accessed by unauthorized individuals with often malicious intent. As data breaches have become more common and visible with the growth of global networking, with increasingly damaging results, new tools and CyberSecurity industries are rapidly evolving to protect against the seemingly constant threat of data breaches.

But at the end of the day, when it's time to upgrade or replace IT assets that often contain enormous amounts of data, protection of that data cannot be an afterthought. From desktops, servers and laptops containing traditional hard drives to mobile technologies with solid state storage devices, companies and institutions need a rigorous strategy for securely destroying data media so it won't fall into the wrong hands once it has left the building.

In this presentation, Mr. McLaurin will discuss the various factors involved in protecting data in decommissioned assets, including classified data, and the tools and methods used in an evolving regulatory and technological environment.
