From Legacy DLP to AI-Native Data Security: Protecting Data in the Age of Copilots and Agents

AI is transforming how sensitive data moves, not just where it is stored. Instead of static documents at rest, organizations now face a world of dynamic, AI-driven content where data is continuously generated, summarized, and shared by copilots and agents. In this talk, we explore the core principles of AI-native data security, why legacy DLP and perimeter controls are insufficient, and how to rethink protection around unstructured content, real-time context, and data-in-use. Attendees will gain an actionable framework for governing AI adoption while maintaining trust, privacy, and regulatory compliance.
